

Are you a DCPS or DC charter high school student fascinated with Japan and Japanese culture?

If so, consider joining Globalize DC this summer for

JAPAN IN DC

Students who have signed up for the Marion S. Barry Summer Youth Employment Program (MBSYEP) are eligible to be paid for their participation in this program. *****

Globalize DC, a local nonprofit organization, is now accepting applications from DC high school students (rising sophomores, juniors, and seniors) from either DCPS or DC charter schools, for its new six-week summer program, “JAPAN IN DC.” If you’re into Japan or just want a global experience without leaving the city, this is the program for you! You’ll spend your time with other highly motivated peers, exploring and getting to know a wide variety of people, places, organizations, and businesses with connections to Japan. It will be a lot of fun – with real-life exposure to the Japanese world and Japan-related careers in your own city! Students will document and share what they learn, and will gain useful work-readiness skills.
